Parental controls are now enabled. You can begin making changes to what your child can access on Google Play.

2 Restricting Apps and games

An age restriction can be placed on all Apps & games downloads based on their PEGI rating, meaning children can only download apps that are rated as age appropriate.

To set a restriction on Apps & games:

Step 1 – In the Parental controls settings, click Apps & games.

Step 2 – In the Apps & games menus, select the age rating that best matches your child's age, and then click Save to set the rating restriction.

3 Restricting Films and TV

Age restrictions can be put on films and TV, to ensure that your child only watches content that is suitable for them.

to confirm.

To restrict TV:

Step 2 – Choose the age rating that best matches your child's age, and click Save to confirm.

4 Restricting Books

Parental controls can be set on the books your child purchases from the Google Play store. These are not done through age ratings like for apps and films. Instead, there is just one option to restrict all sexually explicit books.

To restrict sexually explicit books:

Step 1 – On the Parental controls menu, click Books.

Step 2 – In the Books page, check the box next to Restrict sexually explicit books and then click Save to confirm your choice.

5 Managing spending

Spending on Google Play can not be managed through the app's settings. However, you can set spending restrictions within the Google Play Store via Google Family Link. To find out how to do this, read our Google Family Link parental control guide.

If you let your child use Google Wallet, you must customise settings in the app directly. See how here.
